

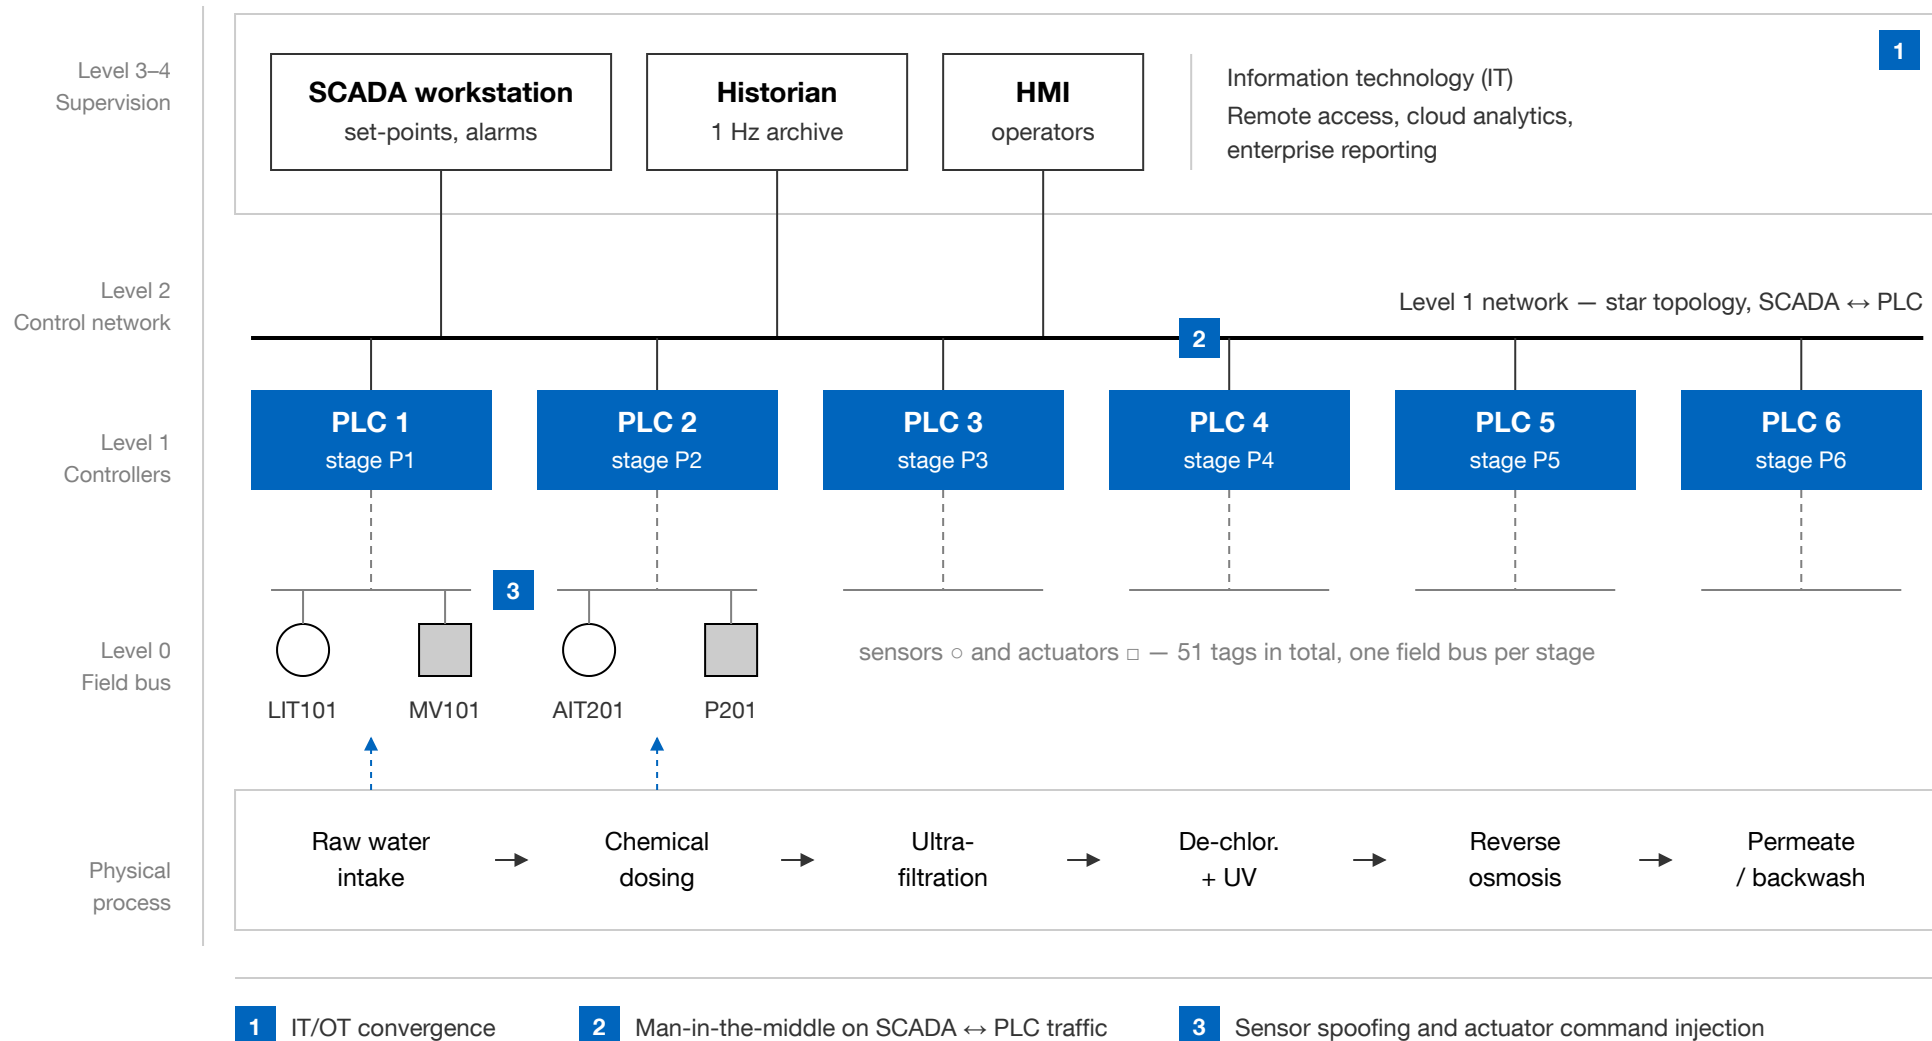

Figure 2.1: Layered architecture of an industrial control system. Six programmable logic controllers, each responsible for one process stage, exchange set-points and measurements with the SCADA workstation over a Level 1 star network, while a Level 0 field bus connects each controller to its own sensors and actuators. The three numbered positions are the attack surfaces exposed by the convergence of information and operational technology.